

Intrathecal Enzyme Replacement for Hurler Syndrome

University of Minnesota, Fairview, Minneapolis, Minnesota, United States

This protocol will examine whether the enzyme alpha-L-iduronidase (Laronidase), delivered into the spinal fluid of patients with Hurler syndrome at intervals before and after bone marrow transplant, is a safe and effective approach to slow the neurologic degeneration seen in Hurler patients undergoing transplantation.